INTRODUCTION.

THIS little Grammar is intended only for absolute beginners, who wish to obtain some knowledge of the Egyptian language without any intention of doing any original work in it. To those who wish to take up the language thoroughly and scientifically, there is always Prof. Erman's Egyptian Grammar, which contains all that a student can require. My aim has been to produce a book which shall be to Egyptian what the ordinary school elementary Greek grammar is to Greek. I am told that by doing so I shall lower the standard of scholarship in Egyptian, but I confess that I fail to see the force of the argument. It has never been found that elementary Greek grammars, or instructing little boys in the elements of Greek, has lowered the scholarship in Greek, and why should it do so in Egyptian? On the contrary, I think that an elementary Egyptian grammar will increase the interest in the Egyptian language and literature by increasing that small section of the public who have felt the charm and fascination of that most ancient civilisation, by showing them the firm foundation on which our knowledge of the language is built, and by letting them see the difficulties which have to be overcome, and the ease with which the great masters of the language surmount the obstacles.

In the study of all ancient languages there are always two classes of people; the large majority who know enough to follow a translation, appreciating the difficulties and enjoying the beauties; and the small minority, to whom a new grammatical form, or a newly found exception to an established rule, is an absolute joy.

My Grammar is not intended for the latter class, but only for those who, knowing nothing, wish to know a little, in order to appreciate better the work of the great hieroglyphic scholars of our time. It contains nothing original, being founded entirely on Prof. Erman's Grammar; even the examples he gives in illustration of grammatical rules are copied, as being the best that could be found for that purpose. The four years' experience, which I have had as a teacher of elementary hieroglyphs, has shown me that a grammar of this kind is needed, and this is my only reason for publishing it.

My sincere thanks are due to Dr. Walker, for suggestions and help in the Grammar; to Mr. and Mrs. Hayter, for much assistance in simplifying the arrangement of the book; and to Prof. Flinders Petrie, for the kind and generous help which he has given me in this, as well as in all my other Egyptological work.

CHAPTER I.

THE HIEROGLYPHIC SIGNS.

EGYPTIAN Hieroglyphs were in use from B.C. 5000, or even earlier, to A.D. 300, in all for nearly 5500 years. The origin of the writing was the same as that of all primitive nations, namely pictures, but unlike other nations the original forms were kept up for all sculptured monuments, until the very end. Side by side with the hieroglyphs however there was evolved a running hand used for ordinary writing, in which the picture signs were abbreviated and reduced till they lost almost all likeness to the originals from which they were derived. This running script is called Hieratic. It developed later on into the writing which is known as Demotic or Enchorial; and finally in the Ptolemaic period, when the Greek influence was at its height in Egypt and the ancient knowledge and understanding of the hieroglyphs was dying out, it became the custom to write Egyptian in Greek letters, thus retaining the ancient language in a modern writing. This hybrid was called Coptic and died out as a spoken language only in the 17th century, though it is used in the liturgy of the Coptic churches in Egypt to this day.

Ex.	Hieroglyphic.	Coptic.
		ΠΠΟΥΤΕ	= God.
	Pa neter	Pnoute
		ΔΠΟΚ	= I.
	ynck	Anok

The hieroglyphic signs are pictures of human figures, animals, birds, and the common objects of daily life among the people, and in their early forms they throw great light on the civilization of that distant time. The writing is usually from right to left (this is invariably the case in hieratic and demotic), but sometimes for decorative reasons the hieroglyphs are written from left to right. They can also be written in vertical columns. The rule is to read towards the faces of the animals and birds. For convenience sake, hieroglyphs are always printed from left to right. The words are written as much as possible in square groups for the sake of symmetry; ex.  . For this reason many signs can be written either vertically or horizontally; ex.  or ,  or . Many sounds also have two signs, one vertical and one horizontal; ex.  or  s,  or  n,  or  m. Occasionally the spelling is sacrificed to symmetry; ex.   Khetef instead of  Kheft, as the former makes the neater group.

The reading of the hieroglyphs was first deciphered by Champollion in 1822 from a study of the Rosetta Stone. He then discovered that the words which he was able to transliterate had their equivalents in Coptic, and that the language which had baffled so many scholars was the ancient form of a language well known to Orientalists. The foundation then of our reading of hieroglyphs is the knowledge of Coptic.

There are no vowels in Egyptian. The signs , , , , are properly consonants; they are here transliterated a, y, ā, and u, as the scientific transliteration is often a great stumbling-block to beginners. A group of consonants like sdm, ntr, htp, are made pronounceable by the insertion of a short ě between the letters, sedem, ncter, hetep, but it must be remembered that this ě is quite conventional, and is not indicated in the hieroglyphs.

Hieroglyphs are divided into four classes:—

1. Alphabetic.
2. Syllabic.
3. Word-signs.
4. Determinatives.

NOTE.—Mr. Griffith gives the name Phonograms to 1 and 2. The alphabetic signs are Unilateral Phonograms; the syllables are Biliteral, or Trilateral, Phonograms, according to the number of letters which they contain.

1. An alphabetic sign represents only one sound. They are used as in all languages for spelling out words. No true vowels are known, for Egyptian was written, like Hebrew and other Oriental languages, in consonants.

	h	h		y	y
	l	l		i	i

2. A syllabic sign represents two or more consonantal sounds :

Ex.  men,  per,  kheper,  nezem.

* These letters are transliterated with a vowel, but they should properly be consonants. Aleph and ayin are shown by the Coptic to be aspirates, and the U is a W.

Egyptian words are generally written partly in alphabetic and partly in syllabic signs. Ex. sma (lit. s-ma), To slay; khentī (lit. khen-t-ī), A statue.

The number of syllabic signs is very great, and they can be learnt only by practice. The Egyptians very frequently made use of a syllabic sign in addition to spelling out the syllable in alphabetic characters. Ex. ba (lit. b-ba-a), A soul; pehtī (lit. p-h-peh-t-ī), Strength; khan (lit. kh-kha-a-u), Night; hentasu (lit. h-hen-n-t-ta-a-su-u), A lizard; being syllables.

With many syllabic signs the last letter of the syllable is written out. This letter is called the Phonetic Complement, it is not intended to be pronounced separately, but merely indicates to the reader how the syllable should end. In the word kem, Black, the reads kem, and the word could very well be written with the one sign only, but it is customary to write the m after it, though the word still remains kem and not kemem. In signs which have more than one phonetic value, e. g. which may be sekhem, or kherp, or ābā, the Phonetic Complement shows which value is to be used; thus:   sekhem,   kherp,   abā. Sometimes the letter used for the Phonetic Complement is not the last, but is the most characteristic of the word; e.g.   us, To command, where the first letter  u is the Phonetic Complement;  seten, King, where the middle letter  t is the Phonetic Complement. Sometimes, in order to make a symmetrical group, the two last letters of a trilateral syllable are written out; e.g.   kherp, To lead;   nefer, Beautiful.

Syllabic signs originated as pictures of the object, and were afterwards used merely to represent the combination of letters of which they are formed. Ex.  her means in the first instance a Face, and is often used in that sense, but it is also used as a syllabic sign where the combination h and r are required, as in    heryt, Terror. So also  khet, which originally meant a Branch, is used as a syllable where kh and t are needed, as in    nekht (lit. n-kht-kh-t), Strength.

3. A word-sign is the picture of an object used as the word for that object; e.g.  the picture of a child means Child,  the picture of the sun means

Sun,  the plan of a house means House. Word signs are difficult to distinguish at first, as a sign is often used as a syllable or as a determinative, as well as a word sign. As a rule however a single sign which represents a whole word is followed by an upright stroke | (see below).

4. A determinative is a picture of the object which follows a word. It is not pronounced, and is written merely as a guide to the reader that he may distinguish the meaning of a word at a glance.

Ex.    thesem, "Dog," is followed by the picture of a dog.    hefau, "Snake," is followed by the picture of a snake.

 pes, "To cook," is followed by the picture of fire. There are however a great many words which cannot be expressed pictorially; these are followed by the picture of a roll of papyrus  or , which is the sign of the Abstract, and which shows that the word can be expressed in writing though not in a picture.

Ex.   rekh, "To know."   yp, "To reckon."

The upright stroke, which follows word-signs and all words written with one sign only, is a special kind of determinative, and is merely a guide to the reader that the preceding sign represents the entire word. Ex.   du, "Hill;"   re, "Mouth;"   sa, "Back." The stroke is often used with a picture determinative. Ex.  mer, "Canal;"

 hen, "Slave;"  se, "Man." The feminine ending t (see p. 22) was lost very early in pronunciation but was continued in the written language; therefore many feminine words take the upright stroke, as the t was not considered a part of the word. Ex.  khast, "Foreign country;"

 renpet, "Year;"  net, "City."

For the determinative of the plural, see p. 24.

A few words take no determinative.

Ex.  yu, "It is;"  yr, "To do;"
ur, "Great;"  sed, "To say."

THE WRITING OF THE SIGNS.

A simple form is used for writing the hieroglyphs, especially the human figures and birds. The alphabet and some of the commonest of the syllables and determinatives are given here.

The beginner should practise these signs, and when proficient should then practise writing them in the opposite direction, from right to left, thus: i.e.

CHAPTER II.

FORMATION OF SENTENCES.

THERE are three forms of sentence in Egyptian :

- (1) The Complete (or Verbal) Sentence.
- (2) The Incomplete [a] (or Simple Nominal) Sentence.
- (3) The Incomplete [b] (or Compound Nominal) Sentence.

(1) The Complete (or Verbal) Sentence. The name Verbal is given to this kind of sentence, as in it the verb occupies the principal position at the beginning of the sentence, preceding the subject. The order of words is as follows :

1. Verb.	2. Subject.	3. Object.
Ex. :
VERB.	SUBJECT.	OBJECT.

sedem	sekhti	kheru
Hears	the peasant	a voice.

meru	ef	su
Loved	he	him.

VERB.	SUBJECT	OBJECT.
khem	ek	sa-ek
Bend	thou	back thy.

(2) The Incomplete [a] (or Simple Nominal) Sentence. In Egyptian, as in many Oriental languages, a sentence is often formed without any verb, but is complete in itself. This is not possible in English, though a secondary clause may sometimes be formed as an Incomplete or Simple Nominal sentence to avoid the repetition of a verb; e.g. "I am from the town, you from the country," "A. is a rich man, B. a poor man." In these two instances, the second clauses, "You from the country," and "B. a poor man," are Nominal sentences. The name Nominal is given to this kind of sentence because the subject is always a Noun or an Absolute Pronoun (pp. 17, 18).

In Egyptian the missing verb is always some form of the verb To be.

The order of words is :

1. Subject.
2. Predicate.

The subject is either a Noun or an Absolute pronoun (see pp. 17, 18); the predicate may be a Substantive, an Adjective, or a Prepositional phrase.

Ex.: SUBJECT. PREDICATE.

Nuk

neb

I [am] the lord of graciousness.

SUBJECT.

ren - ek

Name thy

[is]

PREDICATE.

nefer

beautiful.

Deqer neb

Fruits

all

[are]

her khetu-ef

upon its trees.

(3) The Incomplete [b] (or Compound Nominal) Sentence. The Compound Nominal Sentence is so called because it is formed upon the model of the Simple Nominal Sentence (i.e. with the subject preceding), but with a verb inserted. The order of the words is:—

1. Subject. 2. Verb. 3. Object.

The forms of the verb used are:—

(a) with intransitives and passives, the pseudo-participle (p. 57).

(b) with transitives,  her with infinitive.

INTRANSITIVE VERBS.

SUBJECT.

yau

Old age

VERB.

lau

advances.

SUBJECT.

yb-ef

Heart his

VERB.

au

is glad.

TRANSITIVE VERBS.

yhu

Childishness

hermau

upon renewing (i.e. is renewed).

Aam neb

Bedawin all

hernemy

upon crying out (i.e. All the Bedawin cried out).

The difference in the formation of sentences adds variety to the style in a long piece of prose or in a poem, and prevents monotony.

THE ORDER OF WORDS.

The sentence is divided into two parts.

- a. The first part contains verb, subject, direct and indirect object.
- β. The second part contains specifications of time and space.

In the first part of a Complete or Verbal sentence the order of words is as follows :

1. Verb.

2. Subject.
3. Direct object.
4. Indirect object.

Ex. erdyn seten neb en byk-ef, The King gave gold to his servant.

When the object, either direct or indirect, is a pronoun, it will precede the subject if the subject is a substantive.

Rule 1. A pronoun, whether subject or object, is always put next to the verb.

Rule 2. The pronominal suffix always precedes the absolute pronoun (p. 17).

Ex. erdyn n-y seten neb. The King gave me gold.

erdyn su seten en byk-ef. The King gave it to his servant.

erdyn n-y su seten. The King gave it to me.

erdyn-ef n-y su. He gave it to me.

EMPHASIS.

Emphasis consists in placing before the sentence a word to which it is desired to attract attention; the word is afterwards resumed by a pronoun in the sentence. This is very frequently done contrary to our general usage, the word King, for instance, being constantly emphasized in this way.

Ex. hest-y peh-es pet.

My praise, it reached heaven.

khas t nebt rutn-y er-es, yu yru-y hed ym-es. Every country to which I went (lit. I went to it), I was a hero therein.

The auxiliary verbs āhān and un,
sometimes stand before the emphasized word.

Ex. āhān hen
en seten byty menyef. Then the majesty of the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, he died.

unyn hen-ef yb-ef ua er dut her-es.

Then his majesty, his heart was sad concerning it.

CHAPTER III.

PRONOUNS.

Personal.

There are two kinds of personal pronouns :

1. The conjunctive or suffixed.
2. The disjunctive or absolute.

1. Suffixes.

These pronouns are suffixed to the verb or the noun to which they belong, and are written after the determinative. They are employed as subject, as possessive, or in cases governed by a preposition.

Singular.	Translitera- tion.	Meaning.	Governed by prep.
	Subject.	Possessive.
1 per. mas.  or 	y	I	my [to] me
fem. 	y	I	my [to] me
2 per. mas. 	ek	thou	thy [to] thee
fem. 	eth	thou	thy [to] thee
3 per. mas. 	ef	he	his [to] him
fem.  or 	es	she	her [to] her Plural.
1 per. mas. 	en	we	our [to] us
and fem.
2 per. mas. 	then	you	your [to] you
and fem.
3 per. mas. 	sen	they	their [to] them and fem.  or

Ex. As subject  mer-ef, He loves.

As possessive  yb-ef, His heart.

Governed by prep.  sed en-ef seten, The King speaks to him (lit. speaks to him the King).

2. Absolute.

(a) The absolute or disjunctive pronoun stands alone as in English.

Ex. "His mother took him to the play," where "him" stands quite alone. It is usually employed as the object of the sentence, though on rare occasions it is found as the subject.

Singular.

2nd pers. masc.

and fem.

Ex.  gemn-ef su, He found it (lit. Him).

 edy-ek uy, 'Thou gavest me.

(b) Another form of the absolute pronoun is used for emphasis. It is always the subject of the sentence and occurs only in the Simple and Compound Nominal Sentences. With the exception of the first person singular, it is regularly formed by the syllable  ent followed by the possessive suffixes. Singular.

1st pers. masc. and fem.		ynuk	I
2nd pers. masc.		entek	thou
fem.		enteth	thou
3rd pers. masc.		entef	he
fem.		entes	she

Plural.

1st pers. masc. and fem.	?
2nd pers. masc. and fem.		entthen	you
3rd pers. masc. and fem.		entsen	they

Note. The first pers. plural is not yet known.

Ex.  entsen seshem netcr āa. They lead the great god.

3. Reflexive.

The reflexive is formed as in English by the combination of the word for "self" with the possessive pronouns.

Singular.

1st pers. masc.		sesy	myself
fem.		sesy	myself
2nd pers. masc.		sesek	thyself
fem.		seseh	thyself
3rd pers. masc.		seseš	himself
fem.		seses	herself

Plural.

1st pers. masc. and fem.		sesen	ourselves
2nd pers. masc. and fem.		sesthen	yourselves
3rd pers. masc. and fem.		sessen	themselves

Ex. ynuk neter
āa kheper seseš. I [am] the great god who creates (lit. creating) himself.

Demonstratives.

A. Singular.

Plural.

masc.		pen	} this		ypen	} these
fem.		ten			ypten

C. Another demonstrative pronoun, which occurs in the later period of the language, is always placed before the substantive, and is almost equivalent to our definite article.

Singular.

Plural (rare).

masc.		pa	} this,		pau ,	these,
fem.		ta

D.  nen,  nu, and  na, are used as demonstrative pronouns. They precede the noun, with which they are connected by the possessive particle  en.

Ex.      nen en sekhti. These peasants (lit. This of peasants).

      | nu en neteru. These gods.

       | na en gemhut. These wicks.

CHAPTER IV.

SUBSTANTIVES.

Gender.

Substantives are either masculine or feminine.

A. Masculine nouns are occasionally distinguished by an ending  u, usually however there is no distinguishing mark.

Ex.  mcr. Canal.

 ncb. Lord.

Those with the ending u are—

1. Proper names.

Ex.    Ynpu. Anubis.

    Khufu. Khufu.

2. Nouns derived from verbs and adjectives.

Ex.     huru. A pauper, from hur
Poor.

    shemsu. A follower, from shems, To follow.

B. Feminine nouns invariably end in \ominus t.

Ex.   hemt. Woman.

   merhet. Ointment.

They can be divided into five classes :

1. The naturally feminine, ex.  hemt. Woman.
2. Various inanimate objects which are conceived as feminine ; ex.  nest,  Throne,  uat, Road.
3. Collectives, ex.  | āshat. Multitude.
4. Neuter expressions like  entet. That which.
5. Abstract conceptions ; ex.   setenyet. Kingdom.

Number.

The Egyptians recognized a singular, dual, and plural.

The DUAL, which is rarely used, is formed by an ending $\backslash \ddot{i}$ joined to the masc.  u ( $\backslash \ddot{u}\ddot{i}$) or the fem.  t ( $\backslash \ddot{t}\ddot{i}$). It is not always written out, but is to be read notwithstanding.

There are two methods by which the dual is indicated :

1. By repetition of the sign. This occurs solely with words written with a word-sign.

Ex.  taui. Two lands.

 merti. Two eyes.

2. By repetition of the determinative :

Ex.  tekhenui. Two obelisks.
 āti. Two limbs.

The PLURAL has an ending  n attached to the substantive. It is not always written out, but can be indicated in four different ways.

1. By repeating* three times a word written with a word sign.

Ex.  neteru. Gods.
 peru. Houses.

2. By repeating the determinative three times.

Ex.   hātūn. Chiefs.

3. By the plural determinative , , , or  following the word-sign standing alone.

Ex.  neteru. Gods.
 peru. Houses.
 perut. Fruits.

4. By the plural determinative following the determinative of the word.

Ex.    seru. Princes.

* The method of indicating the plural by the repetition of a sign is used in English in certain abbreviations, e.g. MS. = a manuscript, MSS. = manuscripts; p. = page, pp. = pages.

In feminine words the plural sign is written after the T ($\overset{\Delta}{\text{T}}$), but is pronounced before it (ut).

Ex.  nehebut. Necks.

 renput. Years.

NOTE 1. Collective nouns have a feminine termination, and take the adjective and verb in the singular.

NOTE 2. Abstract nouns are often in the plural.

Ex.  hau. Time.

 tau. Heat.

CHAPTER V.

THE GENITIVE.

THERE are two ways of expressing the genitive; these are called the Direct Genitive and the Indirect Genitive.

A. The DIRECT GENITIVE is expressed simply by the position of the substantives without any connecting word, the governing word standing before the governed.

Ex.  per Ymen. House [of] Amen.

 mer sekhtiu.
Overseer [of] peasants.

The Direct Genitive is generally used—

1. after general designations of locality.

Ex.  dut Hor. Rock [of] Horus.

2. after general designations of time.

Ex.  em rek. hen-cf. In the time [of] His Majesty.

3. after certain frequently recurring words, such as

 mer, Overseer; neb, Lord; per.
House.

Ex. neb tauî. Lord [of] the two lands.

4. when seten, King, and neter, God, are the governed words.

Ex. hemt seten. Wife [of] the king.

NOTE.—Seten and neter being sacred words are always written first, though pronounced last.

The INDIRECT GENITIVE is formed by means of an adjective nî, which means "Belonging to." This adjective agrees in gender and number with the noun which precedes it and to which it belongs.

	Singular.	Plural.
masc.	nî or en	nu
fem.	net	niut

Niut is rarely used, nu or net generally taking its place.

(a) The Indirect Genitive is always used—

1. to designate a part.

Ex. tep en shemu ef. The first of his harvest.

2. to designate material.

Ex. hetep en shest. An offering-table of alabaster.

3. by way of further definition.

Ex. demy en Qebtu.

The city of Coptos.

sc en usert. A man of strength.

(b) It is generally used—

i. to designate the possessor.

Ex. het neter net
Unnefer. The temple of Unnefer.

2. to express the idea of belonging to, or being derived from, a place.

Ex. shenz en Uauat.
Acacia-wood of Nubia.

CHAPTER VI.

ADJECTIVES.

THE adjective agrees with its noun in number and gender, and is written after the noun.

Ex.  heqt nesent. Sweet beer.

 bekhentü urtü. Two great towers.

Exception. The adjective  ky (masc.), ket (fem.), "Another," always precedes the noun to which it refers.

Occasionally the possessive suffix is repeated with the adjective, probably for emphasis.

Ex.  sa-ef ur-ef. His great (i.e. eldest) son (lit. His son, his great one).

There are many adjectives derived from prepositions. These govern a following noun or suffix, like a preposition, but are declinable like other adjectives,

	ymü	He who is in	Derived from		m	In
	yrü	He who is at	" "		r	At
	herü	He who is upon	" "		her	Upon

	teḫi	He who is upon	Derived from		teḫ	Upon
	kheri	He who is under	„ „		kher	Under
	khentü	He who is before	„ „		khent	Before, in front
	nyuti	He who is not	„ „	?
	myti	He who is like	„ „		my	Like
	nü	Belonging to	„ „		en	To
	meḫti	Northern	„ „		meḫt	North

Declension :

Singular.

masc.   yṁi. He who is in.

fem.   yṁt. She who is in.

Plural.

masc.   yṁiu. They who are in.

Ex.     yṁt yb-cf. She who is in his heart.

    ḫerü sha. Those who are on the sand.

  myti-cf. He who is like him.

Degrees of Comparison.

The comparative is formed by placing the preposition  er after the adjective.

Ex. nefer er ykhet nebt.

More beautiful than anything (lit.
Beautiful more than all things).

There is no true superlative. It is expressed by an adjective in the dual, or by $\overleftarrow{\text{ⲓ}}^2$ uā, One, placed before an adjective.

Ex. neferui. Most beautiful (lit. Twice beautiful).

$\overleftarrow{\text{ⲓ}}^2$ ua yker. Most excellent (lit.
The one excellent).

CHAPTER VII.

NUMERALS.

A. Cardinal Numbers.

The numerals are written thus :

units		thousands
∩ tens		tens of thousands
@ hundreds		hundreds of thousands

The greater number precedes the less, as in English.

Ex. |  @ @ ∩ ∩ ||||
 @ ∩ ∩ ||| II,347.

The transliteration of the numerals is as follows :

	uā	One
	seu	Two
	kheut	Three
	fedu	Four
	dua	Five
	sjs	Six
	sefekh	Seven

	khemem	Eight
	pescs	Nine
	met	Ten
	māba	Thirty
	shet	Hundred
	kha	Thousand
	sebū	Ten thousand
	ḥefen	Hundred thousand

NOTE.—The transliteration of the other numerals is still conjectural.

The noun precedes the number and is in the plural.

Exceptions.—The noun is in the singular

1. With the numeral 2.

Ex.  || uya sen. Two ships.

2. In accounts and in specifications of time and measure.

Ex. $\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \text{⊖} \text{⊙} \\ | \text{∩} \end{array} \right.$ renpet 110. One hundred [and] ten years.

 || mḥ fedu. Four cubits.

$\overleftarrow{\text{⊖}}$ nū, One, is treated as an adjective and agrees with its noun in gender.

B. Ordinal numbers.

The ordinals are formed by adding $\overline{\text{O}}$ nu to the cardinals.

Ex. $\overline{\text{O}}$ ^{||} sennu. Second.

They may precede or follow the noun.

Exception. $\overline{\text{O}}$ [□] $\backslash\backslash$ or $\overline{\text{O}}$ [□] $\backslash\backslash$ tepi First, always follows the noun.

CHAPTER VIII.

ADVERBS.

THERE is no special adverbial form, but adverbs can be expressed as follows :

1. By adjectives, either masculine or feminine, preceded by the preposition  er.

Ex.    er menkh. Excellently.

  er āat. Very.

2. By adjectives used absolutely. The feminine

  urt, Great, is used to intensify the adverb.

Ex.    yu-ef gas-ef āsha. He vomits often (āsha, lit. Numerous).

He wept     āau urt, very greatly

NOTE.—For the absolute use of adjectives there is an exact parallel in German; cf. e.g. “schön,” which means either “fine” (adjective) or “finely” (adverb).

3. By derivation from prepositions.

 ym. Therein, thereof, therewith, therefrom.

 kheft. In front.

						em-bah	Before.
		zer-bah		}	Formerly.
		kher-hât
		em-khet		}	Afterward.
		em sa
		her sa
		er sa
		en sa

CHAPTER X.

CONJUNCTIONS.

Conjunctions are used—

I. Enclitically, being joined to the first word of the sentence.

II. Absolutely, as in English.

I. Enclitic.

 ys like "Namely" introduces an explanatory addition.

Ex.  yrn-y en ef seten ys, I made it for him [namely, I], the king.

 en ys. But not.

 sut. But } expresses the opposite to preceding clauses.
 hem. But }

Ex.  yr sut remthet nebt.
 But all men [who preserve this tomb].

 gert. 1. But.

2. Moreover.

 yref } are used for emphasis following the emphasized word.
 ref }

Ex.  scsek yref. Thou thyself.

sedem yref then. Hear ye.

II. Absolute.

ysth. 1. Behold
2. However
3. When } specifies the circumstances under which anything happens.

Ex. ysth uy em sab. Behold me in [the position of] judge.

ysth ref zeden sekhti pen. This peasant said however.

ysk like ysth can be translated When.

Ex. ysk su em khered. When he was a child.

ykher. 1. And.
2. Now.

Introduces new paragraphs of a narrative, and especially precedes a temporal clause.

Ex. ykher em khet heru sua her nen. Now after the days had passed by this.

Is used in promises, threats, and directions, to strengthen what is stated.

Ex. ka erdy-y kheper mu. Surely I will cause water to be.

CHAPTER XI.

PARTICLES.

Emphatic, Interrogative, and Negative particles.

I. Emphatic.

𓄏  yr.

Is used with every kind of sentence, and may be translated "Verily." It generally begins the sentence.

Ex. 𓄏        𓄏 yr entet nebt
em sesh sedem set. Verily all that is in writing, hear it.

𓄏  or  yref or ref (see Conjunctions).

Follows the word to be emphasized, and is not translated.

Ex.      hez en ref ta. The earth became light.

𓄏  yn.

Often emphasizes the subject of a sentence, but is not translated.

Ex.  yn em zed su. Who says it?

 yshcst } Who, What.
 ysy }

Ex.  yshcst pu. Who is it? What is it?

 ysy pu. Who is it?

 ysnu. When? (lit. What of time?)

 ten. Where?

Ex.  yrt er ten. Whither goest thou (fem.)? (lit. Makest thou towards where?)

 pctry or  pcty.

Always stands at the beginning of a sentence.

Ex.  pcty ahet cf. What [is] his field?

 pcty ref su. What is it? (with emphasis).

 teru.

Always follows the first word of the sentence.

Ex teru sekhan-ek. Didst thou remember?

III. Negative.

en or nen.

en is used—

1. With the sedem-ef form of the verb (see p. 55).

Ex. en pern ef ym. He will not come out therefrom.

2. With the sedem-ef form of the verb (see p. 55), when it is not future in meaning.

Ex. en rekh-y su. I know him not.

3. Before a nominal sentence; and in this case, when the subject is a pronoun, the absolute pronouns are used.

Ex. en entef pu em maät. It is not he in truth.

4. With sp, Time, en sep, Never (lit. Not a time).

Ex. en sep ha myt-ef her khast ten ser rek netet.
One like him never came upon this land since the time of the god.

 nen is used—

- 1 With the sedem-ef form of the verb (p. 55) when it has a future meaning.

Ex.  nen pesesh-ef. He will not divide.

2. Before an absolute infinitive.

Ex.  usa nen erdyt her ges. Judging, not putting on one side (i.e. not being partisan).

3. With a following noun or absolute pronoun, when it means "Not to be."

Ex.  nen mu ym, nen uy ym. No water is there, I am not there.

4. With  erdy. To give or cause.  nen erdyt. Without (lit. Not causing that).

Ex.  nen erdyt pesesh-ef set. Without his dividing it.

 nefer en.

An emphatic negative.

Ex.  yr nefer-en unen ma then. If it is not in your possession (lit. in your hand).

 nefer-en yrt mytet. Never was the like done.

Is used when the verb is optative, or final in meaning.

Ex.  ym-ek yr ykhetu er-es.
Do not do anything for it.

Is used to negative imperatives and optatives.

Ex.  em ūa yb-ek. Let not thy heart be proud (lit. Great).

Often used in conditional sentences.

Ex.  tem-
kher-es kheper em hesbut. If it does not become worms.

When compounded with  erdy it means To prevent (lit. Not to cause).

Ex.  ket net tem erdy per hefau. Another [remedy] for (lit. of) preventing snakes from going forth.

CHAPTER XII.

VERBS.

VERBS are divided into classes according to the number of letters in the root. The principal classes are :

1. Biliteral (abbreviated to iilit.)

have two letters.

Ex.  , mch. To fill.

Generally written , the syllable mch and the abstract determinative.

2. Secundae geminatae (iiac gem.)

In these verbs the second and third consonants are the same, the division between them being visible only in certain forms; in all other cases the two letters come together and give the verb the form of a biliteral.

Ex.   un. To be. In the full form
unen.

Generally written , the syllable un, and the phonetic complement n; the full form

is

3. Triliteral (iiiilit.)

have three letters in the root. This is the largest class of all.

Ex.  sedem. To hear.

Generally written , the word sign sedem and the phonetic complement .

4. Tertiae infirmae (iiiiae inf.)

This is also a large class, in which the root was originally triliteral; the third letter,  or , drops out in most forms, giving the verb the appearance of a biliteral, though the conjugation of the iiiiae inf. verbs is not the same as that of the iilit.

Ex.  mery. To love.

Generally written  the syllable mer and the phonetic complement r.

5. Irregular.

The irregular verbs are two.

 yu. To go.

, or  erdy. To give.

6. Other classes.

The Tertiae geminatae (iiiiae gem.), quartae infirmae (ivae inf.), quadriliteral (ivlit.), and quinque- literal (vlit.) are rare, and need not be further noticed here.

NOTE.—The student must remember that the E in the transliteration is not to be counted among the root-letters. In the trilateral verb sedem, for instance, the root-letters are S D M.

CONJUGATION.

The conjugation of Egyptian verbs is entirely different from that of any European language, and is Semitic in character.

The verb sedem, To hear, is here taken as the type; and the forms or tenses of the verb are called, as in Semitic grammars, after the third person singular masculine, the F being the pronoun of the third person singular masculine suffixed to the verb.

The forms of the verb (the use of which is explained below) are :

- |                                    |                                                 |
|------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------|
| 1. Sedem-ef.                       | } Used in verbal sentences (see p. 10).         |
| 2. Sedemn-ef.                      |                                                 |
| 3. Sedemyn-ef.                     |                                                 |
| 4. Sedemkher-ef.                   |                                                 |
| 5. The Pseudo-Participle.          | Used in Compound Nominal sentences (see p. 12). |
| 6. Compounds with auxiliary verbs. |                                                 |
| 7. The Infinitive.                 |                                                 |
| 8. The Passive.                    |                                                 |
| 9. The Participles.                |                                                 |
| 10. Relative Forms.                |                                                 |
| 11. Verbal Adjective. ✓            |                                                 |
| 12. Impersonal Form.               |                                                 |
| 13. Causative Form.                |                                                 |

I. SEDEM-ef

In the form sedem-ef the <sup>subject</sup> follows the verb without any connective between. The <sup>subject</sup> may be either a noun or a pronoun. The pronoun is always suffixed to the verb, but the noun-subject may be quite at the end of the sentence and separated from the verb by other words.

Ex. a) With pronoun-subject :

|                                                                                   |                 |           |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------|-----------|
|  | sedem-ef | He hears. |
|  | sed-y    | I speak.  |

b) With noun-subject :

|                                                                                   |                   |                          |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------|--------------------------|
|  | us hen-ef  | His majestycommanded |
|  | sed-sekhti | The peasantsaid.     |

The sedem-ef form is generally used as—

1. the indicative, either present or past,
- ✓ 2. the subjunctive,
3. the optative.

The tense by which to translate the sedemef form must be judged by the context.

2. SEDEMNEF.

In the sedemnef form the verb receives an ending n, which is written after the determinative, but it is really added to the stem of the verb. This form can usually be correctly translated by the past instead of the present. It denotes the completed action, and is generally used in narrative.

As in the sedemef form the subject <sup>with</sup> or pronoun, follows the <sup>verb</sup> nefer <sup>verb</sup>, whether noun

Ex. a) <sup>with</sup> pronoun-subject :

sedemef. He heard.

yru-y menu. I made monuments

b) with noun-subject :

sedemen hen ef. His majesty heard.

khem en uy neter pen.
This god knew me not (lit. knew-not me god this).

NOTE.—The verb nefer, To be good or well, is always in the sedemef form.

Ex. nefer en Pepy. Pepy is well.

3. SEDEMYNEF.

In this form the verb receives an ending yn which is written after the determinative. It was originally ceremonial, and is used especially when the subject is a person to whom respect is due.

Ex. a) with pronoun-subject :

sedemynef. He heard.

b) with noun-subject :

erdy-yn hen ef. His majesty gave.

Exceptions. With the verbs  sed, To speak,  yu, To go,  yn, To bring,  yr, To do, the sedemynef form is constantly used with any subject.

It is also used in directions and advice :

Ex.       sury yn se. The man should drink [it].

4. SEDEMKHEREF.

A rare form, occasionally used in descriptions and as a mild imperative.

Ex.      sedkherck er es. Say thou to her.

NOTE.—Sedemnef, sedemynef, sedemkherck are all formed in the same way, by inserting a particle (en, yn, or kher) between the root of the verb and the subject.

5. THE PSEUDO-PARTICIPLE.

The pseudo-participle is the ancient inflexion of the verb, but it was superseded by the sedemef forms. Its use is confined to the Compound Nominal sentence, where the subject precedes the verb, but only when the verb is intransitive. There is no equivalent form in English, for it is often used where we should employ a participle, and it can also be translated by the indicative, present or past.

The following verbs take the pseudo-participle when the subject precedes the verb (Compound Nominal sentence (see p. 12).

1. Intransitives.

Ex. fend zebau. The nose is stopped up.

2. Verbs of going (ha, To descend ; yu, To go).

Ex. yau hau. Old age advances.

3. Verbs of Condition when they denote the continuation of the condition (meh, To be full).

Ex. er-khemt-y her-y yu-y meh-kuy. A third of me [added] to me, then I am full.

4. kheper in all its meanings.

Ex. teny kheper. Old age comes to pass.

Exception. The verb rekh, To know, is in the pseudo-participle form with both active and passive meanings. This is the only verb in which the pseudo-participle has an active meaning.

Ex. yu-y rekhhkuy. It is that I know.

6. COMPOUNDS WITH AUXILIARY VERBS.

Yu sedemef.

The verb yu is used with either the Sedem-ef or Sedemn-ef forms. It may be translated, "It is that." It is generally used at the beginning of a paragraph.

Ex. yu sedem-ef. It is that he hears.

yu sedem neter. It is that the god hears (cf. the French "C'est que j'entends").

(1) Yu-ef sedemef.

When the pronoun is added to the auxiliary verb as well as to the verb, it gives the meaning of "accustomed to."

Ex. yu-y sedem-y. I am accustomed to hear.

(2) The verb un, To be, is used in the same manner as yu, and with the same meaning.

(3) The verb āhān, which means literally To stand or arise, precedes the verb. It can be translated "Then." The active voice of transitive verbs follows āhān in the sedemn-ef form; intransitives take the pseudo-participle.

Ex. āhān sedemen hū. Then the prince heard.

āhān hen-ef usa em hetep. Then His Majesty went in peace.

If the subject of the sentence is a pronoun, it is attached to  āḥān.

Ex.  āḥān-y khent kuy, Then I sailed up.

(4) The auxiliaries  yun,  peren, are employed like  āḥān.

(5) The verb  yr, To do or Make, takes the infinitive after it.

Ex.  yry shemt. I went (lit. I made a going).

(6)  pu, which is in reality the demonstrative pronoun, "This," is compounded with the verb as an auxiliary. It invariably follows the verb, and may be translated by "It is," or "It is that."

Ex.  scdm-cf pu. It is he who hears, or, It is that he hears.

7. THE INFINITIVE.

The infinitive is sometimes masculine, sometimes feminine. The masculine form has no special ending, the feminine form ends in  $\triangle t$ .

Ex., masc.  scdm. To hear.

 ḥems. To sit.

fem.  pert. To go out.

 sment. To make firm.

a. Masculine forms are:—

ii lit.

ii ae gem.

iii lit.

iv lit.

v lit.

caus. ii ae gem.

caus. iii lit.

b. Feminine forms are:—

iii ae inf.

iv ae inf.

caus. ii lit.

The irregular verbs  erdyt, To give,

 yrt, To go.

c. Forms either masculine or feminine are:—

v ae inf.

caus. iii ae inf.

Uses of the infinitive.

I. As a substantive (cf. use of infinitive with article in German and Greek).

a. As subject—

Ex.  neht-y

pu yrt en ef set. It was my wish to make it for him. Here  yrt, To make, is the subject of the sentence.

b. As object.

1) After verbs of willing or commanding.

Ex. udctu en cf deba set. He was commanded to pay it.

2) Of kindred meaning (called the Complementary Infinitive, cf. Cognate Accusative).

Ex. khenen-sen khent. They rowed (lit. They rowed a rowing).

Tety mutet. But Teta dies not (lit. Dies not dying).

mest cf mesut. He is born (lit. He is born a birth).

c. As possessive—

Ex. *heru en
set teka em het-nter.* The day of lamp-lighting in the temple.

II. Governed by an adjective.

Ex. nefer medu. Excellent [in] speaking.

III. Governed by a preposition.

When used with certain prepositions it gives them a special meaning.

- 1)  em with the infinitive denotes time.

Ex. [They were astonished]    em
yrt, when they came.

- 2)  er expresses purpose.

Ex.
khent-ef er sekhert kheftü-ef. He sailed up to overthrow his enemies.

Exception.   er sed, which means, literally, In order to say, is simply the beginning of direct discourse.

- 3)  her expresses simultaneousness.

Ex.         gemnef su her pert. He found him as he was going out (lit. Upon going out).

- 4)  en and   mā express cause.

Ex. [I lived honoured by the king]
      mā yrt maät en seten. Because I wrought truth for the king.

- 5)   hena connects the infinitive with the preceding verb, the infinitive being then translated as if co-ordinate.

Ex.

  yu-cf her uncm ta 500 . . . .
hena sury heqt des 100. He eats 500 loaves . . . . and drinks 100 jars of beer (lit. Together with drinking).

IV. Absolutely, as an explanatory clause to a sentence.

Ex.
  yru-es em menu-es en yt-es Ymen yrt en cf tekhemü urü. She made [it] as her monument for her father Amen, making for him two great obelisks.

V. Sedemtef form for all classes.

This is so called because it consists of the infinitive in o t, followed by its subject.

Ex.     peht sen. They arrived at.
    khert meny. The death took place.

It is used in a dependent clause when the subject is different from the subject of the preceding clause.

Ex. "They were astonished when they came:" the subjects of both clauses being the same, the ordinary infinitive is used  em yyt "when they came. But in the sentence, "I was astonished when they came," the two clauses having different subjects, the sedemt-ef form is used,  em yyt-sen, "when they came."

It can generally be translated by the adverb "When."

Ex. [On New Year's Day]  kheft erdyt per-en neb-ef, when the house gives (gifts) to its master.

 redy-y, demyn-y ynbu heqa. When I had given the road to my feet (i.e. when I had run) I came to the Prince's Walls.

8. THE PASSIVE.

I. Uninflected.

This is a difficult form to recognize as it is written exactly like the active, and can only be distinguished by the context.

Ex.  mes en ek kheredu khemt. Three children are born to thee (lit. Are born to thee children three).

II. With   tu.

The passive is generally indicated by adding the syllable   tu to the root of the verb after the determinative.

Ex.      sedemtu-ef. He is heard.

9. PARTICIPLES.

The participles occur in the active and passive, and in the past and present.

The participles are used—

1. Like adjectives.

Ex.         dut yryut er ef. The wrong done against him.

2. Like substantives.

Ex.        mest thay. One (fem.) who has borne a boy.

     sedemyu. The listeners.

       mer en yryt er ef. Pain about that done to him.

10. RELATIVE FORMS.

Masc.

Sedemu-ef.

Sedemun-ef.

Fem.

Sedemt-ef.

Sedemtn-ef.

The N-form is here used for the past.

These substantivised forms are used exactly like real substantives as—

1. Subject.
2. Object.
3. In the genitive.
4. After a preposition.

Ex.  nefer yrert-y en-ek

That which I do to thee is good.

 mer ynent hāp.

Overseer of that which the Nile brings.

 kheft sedeten-ef ym.

According to that which he had said about it.

Sedenuf denotes persons.

Ex.  hesesu neb-ef. He who is praised of his lord.

 unenu send-ef khet khasut. He whose fear [is upon] those who walk the deserts.

II. VERBAL ADJECTIVE.

The verbal adjective is employed both as adjective and substantive.

Ex.  sa-y neb se-rudetifi tash pen. Every son of mine who shall make this boundary increase.

 em yakhet en sedimentifi. As a splendid thing for him who will hear it.

12. IMPERSONAL FORM.

The verb used impersonally, i.e. without a subject, is not infrequent. It can be translated in the same way as the French "On," or the German "Man."

The passives are usually employed in this sense.

Ex.  rhtw. It is known.

This impersonal is often a respectful designation of the King.

13. CAUSATIVE FORM.

The causative is formed by adding the prefix  s to the root of the verb.

Ex.  menkh, To be excellent;  se-menkh, To cause to be excellent;  reckh, To know;  se-reckh, To cause to know.

In verbs beginning with  u, the  u is sometimes omitted in the causative form.

Ex.  usckh To be broad,  se-sckh
To cause to be broad.

CHAPTER XIII.

NOTES ON SYNTAX.

A FEW notes on the syntax of the substantive are given here.

I. The Absolute Substantive.

When the substantive stands alone without a verb or a preposition it is said to be "absolute." This is the case—

1. In designations of time.

Ex.   try en. At the time of (lit. Time of).

 ra neb. Every day (lit. Every sun).

 renpct 4. In the fourth year (lit. Year 4. The absolute substantive is known in English and is used in dates, as when we begin a letter or document "the 21st day of October.")

2. In designations of place.

Ex.   khent. In front.

 meht. North.

3. In expressions with  sep. Time.

Ex.    sep 4. Four times.

If the things are closely connected they are united by the preposition  her.

Ex. sā her huyt. Storm and wind (lit. Storm upon wind).

The preposition   henā permits each of the connected words to stand forth individually, each being of equal importance, like our "as well as."

Ex.          yt-ef henā mutef. His father as well as his mother.
